SELF-PORTRAITS

---

Josephine Hopper, Untitled (Self-Portrait)

Vincent Van Gogh made 30; Frida Kahlo, 55. Rembrandt van Rijn's are thought to number in the dozens (since his apprentices often copied them, it is hard to be certain).

Self-portraits have always been an appealing mode for artists—the sitter is always available, for a start—often created for the benefit of posterity. They have long been of interest to art historians for that reason, as the choices artists make when depicting their outer appearance tells the viewer something about how they regard their inner selves, too.

This exhibition gathers self-portraits made over the course of the last century in all media—painting, printmaking, photography, drawing, and sculpture—pulled from the Provincetown Art Association and Museum's permanent collection.
